The sculpture has a complex, organic form with many holes and a mottled purple and white color scheme. The artist is using a thin tool to work on the top of the piece. The workshop is filled with various art supplies, including paint containers, brushes, and other sculptures in the background. The lighting is warm and natural, highlighting the textures of the materials.

LETTER

FROM THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

TINA KUKIELSKI

Susan Sollins Executive Director and Chief Curator

Art21 has come a long way since its founding 26 years ago. The delivery of robust film and education programs centered on artists as creative role models has led to a growing and engaged audience who believe that artists have the power to say what cannot be said by others and that artists play an important and critical role in shaping our future. Art21's ability to center itself as a digital-first organization that embraces the great potential of social media demonstrates a foresightedness that positioned Art21 for expansion in the wake of a global pandemic.

After almost two years of largely virtual operations, 2022 marked the return to travel and in-person events for Art21. We hosted our second gala event, "The Art21 Family Reunion;" enjoyed watching our films with others at the Whitney Museum of American Art, Rooftop Films, and Tribeca Screening Room; and ended the year in Miami, with Art21's first film premiere event during Art Basel Miami Beach.

Much of 2022 was dedicated to the production of the eleventh season of Art in the Twenty-First Century, our PBS-broadcast television series. We traveled for the first time since the beginning of the COVID-19 pandemic, from New York to New Mexico, the "Land of Enchantment," and to Loíza, the seaside town in Puerto Rico settled by formerly enslaved Africans. Through our Extended Play film series, we transported our viewers into artists' studios in Johannesburg, London, Los Angeles, and San Francisco.

I feel a deep sense of gratitude for all of the influential artists who have invited Art21 into their lives and entrusted us with sharing their voices with the generations to come. I never tire of hearing many of them say that they learned about and watched Art21 films as students in grade school, high school, or college. Their work and testimonials serve as a reminder of the importance of our mission and the impact that Art21 can have on the world.

With the continued commitment of everyone who contributes to accomplishing the mission of Art21, the years to come have the potential to be our best yet. And to those who may be new to Art21, I invite you to join us in our efforts to amplify the work of contemporary artists and to reach all of the people across the globe who don't have access to contemporary arts institutions.

Yours truly,

REFLECTIONS ON THE EARLY DAYS OF ART21

SUSAN DOWLING GRIFFITHS

Co-Creator of Art in the Twenty-First Century

I'm always happy to go down memory lane and talk about how it all began. The first idea for Art21 emerged in Mexico, during one of my many visits to my good friend Susan Sollins, who back then was primarily curating traveling exhibitions of contemporary art. She had a beautiful place in Cuernavaca overlooking a gorgeous valley. Given my experience producing television shows for WGBH, she asked if she could venture into this field. "Of course," I replied. "You have a great eye and have been curating all your life."

Since we were both ready for a new adventure, we initiated a partnership to develop a new series about contemporary art for primetime public television. The most important aspect was to let artists speak for themselves—we didn't want to be told by experts what artists were thinking. It should be noted that in the late '90s, there weren't many people who liked or knew what contemporary art was.

Our college friend and major actress Jane Alexander had just become the Chair of the National Endowment of the Arts (NEA). We visited Jane in her Washington DC office, and she was enthusiastic about this initiative to make contemporary art accessible and brought our proposal to a panel of peers who also warmly embraced our concept. A grant from the NEA was key to starting to plan in earnest.

I loved the whole planning process, from forming the nonprofit corporation to recruiting our first board members to developing a fundraising strategy. Important early supporters were Migs Wright, Agnes Gund, and David Howe, who were not only key partners in the arts but also thoughtful advisors and champions of Art21.

Our very first shoot was in Bilbao, Spain, with the extraordinary artist Richard Serra, whose connection was facilitated by Agnes Gund. One of Art21's treats was bringing us to heavenly places in the world. Through the years, it was exciting to bring our content beyond television through the online series Extended Play (formerly Exclusive) and New York Close Up. The latter series allowed us to focus on artists who were early in their careers living and working in New York City.

The most rewarding thing for me was that Art21 became important to artists, teachers, collectors, and art lovers everywhere. Thank you, Tina Kukielski and the Art21 staff, for continuing such important work and for making Art21 more brilliant and creative than ever. Twenty-five years after its founding, it is thriving!

Yours truly,
Susan Dowling Griffiths

Art21's Extended Play series provides unmediated, behind-the-scenes access to today's leading artists. Through process-revealing footage and intimate interviews, these curatorially-driven films chronicle a diverse spectrum of international projects, ranging from major commissions to exploratory sketches. Produced in close collaboration with the artists featured throughout the series, Extended Play uncovers the provocative ideas, timely cultural influences, and biographical anecdotes that inspire them. Extended Play films have been accepted and honored by more than 40 festivals, including Artecinema, DOC NYC, and DART Festival. In fiscal year 2022, the film "Wangechi Mutu: Between the Earth and the Sky" was selected for the Jury's Citation Award at the Thomas Edison Film Festival.

ART IN THE TWENTY-FIRST CENTURY

— Alex Da Corte

Traversing the country—from New York City, to Santa Clara Pueblo in New Mexico, to Loíza in Puerto Rico—Art21’s production teams filmed 12 of the most groundbreaking artists of our time in the development of the eleventh season of the Emmy-nominated, Peabody Award-winning documentary series Art in the Twenty-First Century. The only series on US television to focus on contemporary art, Art in the Twenty-First Century presents some of today’s most innovative artists in their homes and studios, going behind-the-scenes to reveal how artworks are conceived and made. Season 11 marks a return for the PBS broadcast series to thematic focuses and features artists, including Amy Serald, Guerrilla Girls, Miranda July, and Hank Willis Thomas.

ART21 FAMILY REUNION

Art21's second gala was held on Thursday, May 5, 2022 in New York City in celebration of 25 years of Art21. The Art21 Family Reunion honored longtime Art21 supporter and President Emerita, Migs Wright, as well as award-winning filmmakers Stanley Nelson and Marcia Smith of Firelight Media. The beautiful spring evening was charged with energy as the event brought together Art21's global family of artists, filmmakers, educators, and supporters. Speeches were made by artists Fred Wilson and Oliver Herring, as well as filmmakers Christine Turner and Tucker Gates. In the true spirit of a family reunion, guests enjoyed an evening of board games, a silent auction, buffet-style fare, and drinks. Following the dinner, artist Rafael Lozano-Hemmer played a lively DJ set to close out the festivities. Proceeds from this event supported the ongoing production of films and multimedia content that facilitates access to contemporary artists and art.

EDUCATION

“I was floored by the generosity of our Art21 guest artists, the quality of our workshops, and just how good it felt to all be together in-person again.”

— Educator Survey Response

Responding to pandemic restrictions in 2020, Art21 moved its educational programming online. Following years of virtual programming, FY2022 welcomed the return of in-person events.

ART21 EDUCATORS

Founded in 2009, Art21 Educators is an intensive, year-long professional development initiative, designed to support K–12 educators in any subject area who are interested in bringing contemporary art, artists, and themes into classroom teaching and learning. The program begins with a Summer Institute in July. After two years of virtual Summer Institutes, Art21 Educators were excited to be together again in New York City.

Art21 Educators in the 2022–23 cohort came from around the United States, Canada, and Brazil. Highlights from the week included presentations from Art21-featured artists Janine Antoni and Azikiwe Mohammed. Participants attended sessions led by fellow Art21 Educators alumni and Art21 staff members in addition to making art and visiting art galleries and museums.

ART21 AMBASSADORS

Art21 Ambassadors incorporates key elements of those offered in the Art21 Educators program and allows educators to participate through a smaller time commitment, such as an hour- or day-long workshop.

“Art21 offers digestible information for my students on the art world, its new ideas, and its players. It offers a path out of teaching the Western European canon.”

— 2022 Educator Survey Response

Art21 offered a robust series of professional development programming in FY2022. Leaning into the strengths of hybrid programming, Art21 continued to offer virtual series, such as “What is Contemporary Art?” with the San Francisco Museum of Modern Art, while returning to in-person events, like national conferences for the American Alliance of Museums and the National Art Education Association.

RESOURCES

The primary educational resource that Art21 provides is its library of films. To supplement them, Art21 offers a variety of tools to help educators use the films in their classrooms. Resources include free downloadable Educators’ Guides and READ articles and playlists written by Art21 Educators alumni and staff.

Educators’ Guides released in FY2022 featured artists in the digital series, including KING COBRA (Doreen Lynette Garner), Marcel Dzama, Azikiwe Mohammed, Wangechi Mutu, Jaimie Warren, and Bryan Zanisnik.

“It’s the only art-education resource that is artist-centric: Artists in their studios talking about their process and way of thinking. These are priceless primary sources.”

— 2022 Educator Survey Response

“Art21 offers an in-depth and accessible connection with contemporary artists talking about their work. The education guides are also so helpful in transforming the videos into something that can be used in class. Other resources mostly offer either prompts or words from artists. Art21 offers the whole package.”

PROGRAMS

Art21 produces events with artists, filmmakers, and curators that deepen the public’s understanding of and engagement with contemporary art. Each public program is tailored to the featured artist’s practice, interests, and personality. Due to pandemic restrictions, public programs were held virtually until summer 2022.

PROGRAM SPOTLIGHT

“Heidi Lau’s Spirt Vessels” was featured in Rooftop Films’ night of “Cemetery Shorts” at Green-Wood Cemetery in Brooklyn, New York. Director Bryan Chang joined the audience Q&A.

READ

Art21 READ offers access to intimate, inspiring, and wide-ranging written content from artists and educators. Text-based interviews with artists like Rose Salane and Harry Gould Harvey IV, featured this year, are complemented by original photography commissioned by Art21. Other articles and playlists highlight the insights and experiences of educators who teach and use contemporary art in the classroom. Across Art21 READ, we work with a passionate community of writers, curators, and educators to write articles, conduct interviews, and bring fresh perspectives to our work.

In FY2022, Art21 published 16 new interviews with artists and 9 new articles from educators, while highlighting the archive of published interviews and articles available on Art21.org, all in a new biweekly newsletter. Through three columns, Art21 shares a variety of unique content: conversations that give insight into their trials and successes in “In the Studio,” sharing essays from artists unpacking their concerns in their practices in “Big Question,” and giving a platform to educators’ invaluable contributions in “Teaching with Contemporary Art.” This evolving online publication gives readers greater access to the worlds of artists and educators in Art21 READ.

“It’s a gradual shift, in terms of my role as an artist or simply my role as observer. It’s something that I don’t know yet what it is going to lead to. In that sense, the past two years were a bit of a fracture in my personal history, not least because I loved it.”

PARTNERSHIP

Art21 partnered with Printed Matter on the launch of the 2022 NY Art Book Fair, its first in-person fair since 2019, which took place October 13–16, 2022. The NY Art Book Fair is the leading international event that provides a platform for artists’ book publishers. As a component of this partnership with Printed Matter, Art21 published a series of READ interviews with artists who have a long history of participating in the NY Art Book Fair, including Cory Arcangel, Paul Sepuya, and Devin Troy Strother. The event attracted thousands of visitors and featured the works of hundreds of artists and publishers.

The artists’ voice is so important, and although we see and read many interpretations, Art21 allows singular access to artists’ lives, minds, and creative practices without filter. Not only do their films inspire current and future generations; their documentation of so many important artists provides a critical account of the importance of these voices in perpetuity.
